

The Presidents Thoughts

We are now well into lockdown and I hope you are all keeping well. For many people particularly those involved with the necessities of our way of life this has been a worrying time but possibly on the plus side their worth to society is possibly now better appreciated by the populace as a whole and put in perspective by those who think they manage events on our behalf.

That said what have the old car world and Studebaker owners specifically been doing with their time? I have like you all been restricted in the use of our vehicles but to some I suspect working on them has saved us from going bonkers there is after all only so much you can do to the house and garden and the third repeat of Morse does eventually begin to drag on a bit.

I won't project my vanity and give you chapter and verse as to the undivided attention that I have been able to lavish on my pride and joy because that would imply that when lockdown is lifted I will startle you all with the most immaculate example of a Studebaker you have ever seen, the reality is that many of the smaller jobs have been carried out but to the casual observer there is little change, but without the pressure of a completion date looming the work being done is more enjoyable.

In conclusion I hope by the time you read this we will officially be able to go out and make use of the cheaper fuel price before "they" increase the fuel tax.

Start the wheel rolling
